

Gary Hogben Profile

His activities include

Representing the UK on CEN TC216 WG1 : Human Medicine, where he is currently leading the process of revising EN13623: 2010 - Chemical disinfectants and antiseptics - . Gary was the lead author on the original 2010 edition.

- He has sat on the British Standards Institute Working Group CH216 : Chemical disinfectants and antiseptics.
- He is working on the Environment Agency Standing Committee of Analysts that has produced new sampling standards for Legionella testing in water.
- Gary is acting as Technical Advisor to a Department of Health review regarding selection of techniques for the suppression of Legionella in hospital water supplies. He also advised the Department of Health Estates on the content of HTM04-01 2016.
- His research interests include rapid detection of Legionella in water for which he achieved a Department of Trade and Industry SMART award. He also has an interest in anti- microbial surfaces
- He is an advisor to the Royal Society for Public Health.
- The only UK water treatment representative at the European Surveillance Group on Legionella infections
- Currently Gary is the Technical Manager of "Feedwater Ltd Company"

In addition to this Gary is a regular speaker at professional conferences regarding water microbiology.